

A LIST OF THE INHABITANTS
OF CRAVEN AND BORDERING DISTRICTS,
FIVE CENTURIES AGO ;

BEING THE POLL TAX RETURNS OF THE WAPENTAKES OF STAINCLIFFE
AND EWECROSS, 2ND RICHARD II., (A.D. 1379.)

(Reproduced, by permission, from the "Yorkshire Archaeological and Topographical Journal," transcribed from the original Rolls).

HIS famous Tax, which was the cause of an ill-starred revolt, was framed and levied on the accession of King Richard II., as a means of raising funds to re-furnish the Treasury coffers, which had been emptied on French battlefields, and to maintain Calais and other maritime towns of France, then in the possession of England. It was in the form of a graduated poll-tax, ranging from 10 marks, at which the Duke of Lancaster was charged, down to 4d., on all lay persons above the age of 16 years, notorious mendicants excepted. The clergy were separately taxed. All married couples were charged at a single rate.

These ancient Rolls are especially valuable, as they exhibit in great measure the state of society at the time ; who were the Knights and Esquires ; who the merchants, artificers, &c., and what the relative size and importance of the villages comprised. From these simple lists we gather the number and names of the married and unmarried inhabitants, what their degree and avocation, although these are not always stated. The same rank or trade is, moreover, not always charged alike, which must have been regulated by the income or standing of the individual. Thus, an Esquire was usually rated at 20s., but sometimes at 6s. 8d., and even 3s. 4d. Farmers of manors and granges were charged 2s. ; tradesmen and artificers commonly 6d., but occasionally 1s. ; innkeepers, 2s. and 1s. ; while the great mass of the people, who were engaged in agriculture, paid a groat, or 4d. Entries of the same trade are often described under different names, e.g., a smith is sometimes a mareschal, ferour, or faber ; a tailor, cissor, taillieur, or taliar ; a butcher, bocher, flesher, carnifex, or fleshever ; a grocer, spicer ; a joiner, sagher ; a shoemaker, sutor ; a mason, cimentor ; a builder or waller, douber or dauber ; a thatcher, theker ; a weaver, textor or webster ; a cloth-fuller, fullo or walker; a dyer, tinctor or lystar; a merchant, mercator; a peddler pedder. One avocation (under Arncliffe*) is Emptor lanarum. This means a stapler or dealer in wool, and the person so taxed must have been, from the amount levied,—4s. 4d.,—in a large way of business. He probably bought the wool from the monks of Fountains and Bolton Abbeys, whose extensive flocks grazed on Fountains Fell and the adjoining moors. Other occupations, such as hosteler, herbejour, miller, diker, slater, nayler, glasier, &c., are obvious and self-explanatory.

The places are arranged alphabetically, and according to the modern spelling of them.

Ux is short for uzor, meaning wife.

A LIST OF CRAVEN MEN

WHO FOUGHT AT

FLODDEN FIELD, A.D. 1513.

THE Battle of Flodden Field, one of the most decisive events in English history, was fought on the 9th of September, 1513. The Scots were utterly defeated, and at the close of the combat 10,000 of their pierced and bleeding bodies lay lifeless on the field, including those of the King (James IV.), his son, twelve earls, and fifteen lords and heads of clans,—the flower and gallantry of Caledonia! In the refrain of an old Scottish melody, “The flouirs o’ the forest were a’ wede awa’.” The English were led by the veteran Earl of Surrey, who, at that time, was Lieut.-General of the northern counties of England. There is a manuscript of an old ballad preserved in the British Museum (Harl. MSS. No. 3526) which cites the following interesting particulars: “Heare is the famous historie or songe, called Floodan Field,”—says the title of the ballad; “in it shalbe declared how, whyle King Henrie the Eight was in France, the King of Scoots, called James, the fowerth of that name, invaded the realme of England; and how he was incountred with all at a place called Branton, on Floodan Hill by the Erl of Surry, lieutenant-generall for the Kinge, with the helpe of dyvers lords and knights in the North Countrie, as the Lord Dakers of the North, the Lord Scrope of Bolton, with that most coragious Knighte, Syr Edward Standley, who for his prowis and valiantness shewed att the said battell, was made Lord Mount Eagle, as the sequel declareth.”

The ballad is generally stated (but on questionable authority) to have been written by one, Richard Jackson, a schoolmaster at Ingleton, about fifty years after the battle. Allusion is made in it to Henry Clifford, “the Shepherd Lord,” of Barden Tower, who led a goodly array of stout Craven yeomen to the sad and bloody conflict, many of whom doubtless never came back again. In the words of the ballad:—

Now like a captain bold he brought
 A band of lusty lads elect,
 Whose curious coats cunningly wrought,
 With dreadful dragons were bedeckt.

From Penigent to Pendle Hill,
 From Linton to Long Addingham,
 And all that Craven coasts did till
 They with the lusty Clifford came.

All Staincliffe hundred went with him,
 With striplings strong from Whorledale,
 And all that Hauton-hills did climb,
 With Longstroth eke and Litton dale.

Whose milk-fed fellows fleshly bred,
 Well brown'd, with sounding bows upbend,
 All such as Horton fells had fed,
 On Clifford's banners did attend."

Lord Clifford was given a principal command, and survived the battle nearly ten years. The understated list does not comprise the names of all his followers, or those who served under him, as only a portion of the army-roll has been discovered among the archives at Bolton Abbey. Such an important place, for example, as Skipton is omitted. The list is abstracted from a volume entitled "The Householde Booke of Henry, Lord Clifford," and is dated, "Anno Henr. Octavi Secundo," or the 2nd year of Henry VIII. The battle having been fought in the 5th year of that monarch, it is most probable that this was a part list of Lord Clifford's retainers, liable to be called upon in a time of necessity, and therefore most, if not all, of those Craven men who were then living and capable would actually join him in so important an engagement. The total number of names comprised in the list is 321.

The places are arranged alphabetically.
